CALL FOR PAPERS

Italian Association of Development Economists (SITES) & Global Labor Organization (GLO) Annual Conference 2024

Sites-GLO Annual Conference

<https://www.sitesideas.org/sites-glo-annual-conference>

11-13 September 2024 | Naples, Italy

The IX Annual SITES Conference is organized jointly with GLO, and in collaboration with the CRISEI Institute (Department of Business and Economics, University of Naples Parthenope). The conference is hosted by the University of Naples Parthenope on 11-12-13 September 2024.

Social Inclusion, Migration, and Global Inequalities

Economic development is more often coupled and curbed by social exclusion and inequalities.

Within countries and regions, barriers arising from legal systems and labor market regulations or discriminatory and stigmatizing attitudes, beliefs, or perceptions prevent some groups from fully participating in political, economic, and social life.

Across countries and regions, the rising trend in global migration is frequently accompanied by the increasing vulnerability of migrants in terms of citizenship, language ability, relevant skill sets, social networks, and acceptance by the natives.

The conference aims to provide a forum for development and labor economists to identify the roots of social exclusion and discrimination and to discuss policies to sustain inclusive growth and reduce global inequalities.

The international SITES–GLO conference 2024 invites the submission of full papers, long abstracts, or complete sessions (three or four papers) related to the topics of the conference and the general themes of development and labor economics.
